The Concordia University Peace and Conflict Resolution Academic Series address issues of peace building and management of deep-rooted conflict in local and international arenas. The Series is grounded in the wide range of student and faculty interests and expertise while contributing to public debate.

While including traditional lectures and panels with audience participation, the series emphasizes interdisciplinary approaches and formats such as workshops, films screenings, electronic cafés, international video conferences, playback theatre, and visual arts.

Each event is co-sponsored by one or more academic departments that ensures a direct benefit to students enrolled in the related courses. Students may be involved in developing proposals and event coordination, while a faculty member (full-time or part-time) serves as coordinator. All events are open to the public.
